DE VALERA MADE INDIAN CHIEFTAIN

Chippewa Bestows His Name and Everything Upon Irish President.

CHIPPewa INDIAN RESERVATION, Wis., Oct. 18.—Nay Nay One Abo, "The Dressing Feather," was a famous Indian chief of the Chippewa who secured for his tribe the rights to the Wisconsin land under the treaty of 1854.

The chief's name and all the prestige that goes with it was bestowed on Eamon De Valera, president of the Irish republic, by the surviving members of the Chippewa tribe on their reservation in northern Wisconsin yesterday. The ceremony took place in an open corn field on the reservation.

Chief Billy Boy greeted De Valera in Chippewa. He was followed by Joe Klingebach, the head man of the tribe, who presented the Irish leader a beaded tobacco pouch and moccasins, and said:

"I wish I were able to give you the prettiest blossom of the fairest flower on earth, for you come to us as a representative of one oppressed nation like us."

Chief Billy Boy expressed the same sentiment when he said:

"We, too, feel we are not free. We thought that because our forefathers owned all this land that some of it at least would rightfully belong to us, but it is not so. We own nothing outright, but must go to the Government for everything that we wish. If they do not approve our requests, we do not get our wishes."

Chief Billy Boy then invested President De Valera with his new name, and told him that he now belonged to the Chippewa nation.
